SrA. Cheryl Baker, far left and SSgt. Sean Sprayberry, far right, introduce members of the 65th Operations Support Squadron as they present a check to the Lajes Youth Telethon in the amount of $713. This year's telethon once again raised more than $20,000 "For the Kids' Sake '98." The money is used to offset program costs and fees.

1998 telethon brings in more than $20,000 for the kids' sake

Members of Team Lajes came through in a big way this weekend as the 1998 Lajes Youth Telethon once again broke the $20,000 mark "for the kids' sake."

The schedule of month-long activities and the 6-hour live telethon broadcast Saturday evening had the tote board reading $20,765 by the end of the broadcast.

"This year we've seen a tremendous outpouring of support from units and individuals all across the base," said Lou Denham, family member support flight chief. "The final numbers aren't in yet, but we're pretty sure we'll be near $21,000 when everything is added up."

Money raised during the telethon events goes directly to support youth activities at Lajes. Because of these funds, parents here don't pay a membership fee and they pay reduced costs for sporting events and other activities are inexpensive or free of charge.

"If it weren't for the generosity of Team Lajes members, many parents would find themselves paying membership fees of more than $15 per child and the costs for sporting events, as an example, could be as high as $35 per child," Denham explained. "While the telethon and all the events surrounding it are a lot of work, there are many children at Lajes who benefit directly from everyone's assistance.

"The slogan says for the kids' sake, but the telethon really benefits all of us," said Col. Rod Gibson, 65th Air Base Wing Commander. "For more than 25 years Team Lajes has come through for our kids and that helps us all.

"It helps us get to know each other better as individuals and as a community. That, indirectly, helps keep the mission operating at peak efficiency, and that benefits everyone.

"Once again, I'm extremely proud to be a part of Team Lajes and a part of this best-ever telethon. Well done."

New one-way system in place near club

One way street system 5by Top of the Rock Club from T-106 to intersection at T-122

Beginning Tuesday traffic flow by the club will change to a one-way system. The street between the club (T-121) and VOQ (T-122) will be one-way. Beginning at the bottom of the club parking lot, traffic will only be able to travel toward the bowling alley. Two-way traffic will resume at the intersection between the club and the bowling alley. This change is necessary to reduce the risk to pedestrians near the club.

Snack bar video games

The Oceanview Snack Bar has made many great improvements in the past few months. However, the video game room is something that needs to be looked into because of the very violent games and the small children who pass by to go into the play room. The videos are graphic and violent and, as a parent, I don't like my children to see these things. Could these games be moved to a place where small children don't have to walk by them or see them or maybe just moved out all together?

I agree that Susanne Welshans and her staff are doing an outstanding job and more improvements are on the way. I also acknowledge your concerns on the video games in the arcade room at Oceanview. Management is in the process of reviewing existing video machines and intends to rotate the Oceanview machines to different facilities so they are not as accessible to children. Thanks again for your comments and your patronage at our Oceanview Snack Bar.

Lajes family more fitting

I would like to thank the extraordinary personnel you have in the wing. I enjoyed the festivities at the consolidated club on April 24. When it was time to go, I looked for the normal, white anti-DUI courtesy van. While mentioning this to my counterpart outside the entrance, the anti-DUI van driver advised me the normal van wasn't available that evening. He was very courteous and told me the keys had been misplaced and he was using his POV for the evening. He mentioned the service could not be overlooked when a fix was available. The people at Lajes are very caring and I respect the thought of "Team Lajes." More and more I feel "the Lajes Family" is more fitting.

Your comments reflect my feelings on Team Lajes "exactly." Thanks.

This Ol' Base

Summer doesn't have to include ants

65th CES

For those of you who will be experiencing your first Terceira spring, this time of the year is ant season at Lajes.

Residents and base workers can control these pests by some common sense techniques. First, practice good housekeeping by regularly vacuuming, sweeping and cleaning around stoves, microwaves, refrigerators, between washers and dryers, around trash cans, along baseboards and around food pantries.

Remove pet dishes and pick up after your pet eats. Don't leave food open on tables and counters. Foods and beverages containing sugar as well as some citrus fruits (even some lemon-scent furniture polishes) attract forager ants - in very large numbers.

Next, acquire ant control bait stations - available at the base commissary and the military family housing maintenance self-help store (for MFH residents only. Quantities are controlled and limited).

Strategically deploy the stations where ants travel to and from their colonies. Generally, bait stations should be positioned around cracks or crevices of the infested buildings.

Forager ants will locate the bait stations, feed and take the insecticide back to the colony for egg-laying queens and other ants. When the egg-laying queen dies, the colony dies. This is the safest, most effective, and environmentally-friendly treatment for ants. Surface sprays or contact sprays only kill the ants that are there foraging for food. While sprays may provide quick, short-term kills, in most cases, the ants are back in a few days.

Bait stations take more time to take effect, but during ideal weather conditions can last up to three months. Do not touch bait stations after deployment. You want foragers to feed and return to the colony with the bait. Do not spray or apply any other insecticide.

According to DOD policy, it is the responsibility of MFH residents to control pests. If you cannot control the pests, then call CE customer service to arrange for the pest control shop to conduct an integrated pest management survey.

I've heard about a big fair going on in Lisbon this summer - what is it called and what's it all about?

The 1998 Lisbon World Exposition will be held from May 22 to Sept. 30 in East Lisbon by the River Tagus. The exposition's theme will be "The Oceans, a Heritage for the Future," whose objective is to make the world's population more sensitive to the importance of oceans, namely the need to preserve their ecological balance to avoid the threat of the rapid destruction of their life and resources.

This will be the last world exposition of the 20th century and it will offer a range of cultural and entertainment events. During the exposition's 132 days there will be more than 5,000 national and international performances in all artistic areas, which will give visitors a taste of the Portuguese and international culture.

One of the EXPO '98 highlights will be an Oceanarium, which will be known as the Oceans Pavilion. It is a giant aquarium that will recreate the flora and fauna of the oceans. It will be the largest in Europe and the second largest in the world. The aquarium will feature a central tank with a volume of more than 6,000 cubic meters of water. This is equal to four Olympic-size swimming pools.

The central tank will contain all the fauna found in the high seas, ranging from shoals of sardines to tuna, sharks and a wide variety of other species. In addition, there will be four smaller aquariums which will depict the Antarctic (with penguins and seals), a coral reef in the Indian Ocean, the Pacific and the Azores in the Atlantic with its variety of fish species and sea birds.

EXPO '98 officials expect that the Oceanarium will be one of Lisbon's greatest attractions.

So far more than 147 countries and six international organizations and several companies have confirmed their presence.

For ticket information, call the central ticketing office at (01) 8680426, or fax (01) 8681800 or e-mail: ticketing@expo98.pt. ## Fragata D. Fernando e Gloria

A naval frigate named after the Queen of Portugal, Dona Maria II, whose full name was Maria da Gloria, and her husband, Dom Fernando. The ship is currently being restored in Aveiro and will be on show at EXPO '98. The frigate had a long and interesting history.

Built in Damao Grande, in India, she was launched in 1843, and for more than 30 years sailed regularly between Portugal, Angola, Mozambique and India. Much later, 1939-1940, she commanded the naval fleet in the Tagus before being converted into an orphanage and school where orphaned boys and others from poor homes received an education and naval training.

Cultural Crossroads

With Eduardo Lima

To ask a question, call Ext. 23413, or
E-mail: eduardo.lima@lajes.af.mil

In 1963 the ship was ravaged by fire and spent 30 years on the mud banks of the Tagus. Two years ago it was retrieved from the depths and is currently being restored on the initiative of the National Commission for the Portuguese Discoveries and the Portuguese Navy. The ship will now return to its glory days. After EXPO '98, the last Portuguese ship built in India will be moored on the Tagus and serve as a museum and sailing school.

Olympic building

After the end of EXPO '98, this building will be home to the International Olympic Committee, hence its name. This is a four-story building located between the Knowledge of the Seas Pavilion and the Portuguese National Pavilion. During the Expo it will house shops, three restaurants, services and a number of exhibition areas. An agreement was reached in June 1996 with the Madeira Regional Government for part of the building to house its mainland offices.

Opening times

The Lisbon World Exposition will run from May 22 to Sept. 30 opening its doors each day at 9 a.m. and closing nightly at 3 a.m. The pavilions will be open from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. and every day from 7:30 a.m. to 9 p.m. there will be a street theater consisting of a procession of water machines. The procession marks the end of the daytime period and the beginning of evening events. These will begin with a varied program.

SrA. Brian Haynie, the base network security administrator, gathers data on which sites are the most accessed and which users do the most web downloading through use of a computer program. Although people may use the Internet for personal use, a new policy letter prohibits doing so during the hours of 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Base network administrators say that surfing ties up bandwidth necessary for smooth business operations.

Net surfing wipes out servers

SSgt. Rosaire Bushey
Editor

Internet surfers are tying up scarce bandwidth making it a slow chore for official users of the world wide web to accomplish business-related tasks.

That, according to network administrators at the 65th Communications Squadron, is the reason a new policy letter, signed by Col. Rod Gibson, 65th Air Base Wing Commander, was sent out recently detailing the dos and don'ts of Internet use.

"At first we asked that people not use the 'net during duty hours," said TSgt. Jeffrey Bone, assistant NCOIC, network control center. "We were finding that people weren't doing that and were using duty time to surf non-military and non-official sites. Now, we've had a letter come down that doesn't just ask people not to do it, it spells out that people will not surf during duty hours."

Because of our location and the need for off-island sources of information, Bone said that the new policy letter doesn't mean people can't use the web from their office computers, it just means they can't do it during business hours.

"If people want to come in early and check their stocks or the sports scores, or if they want to do it after work, that's fine," he said. "Surfing during lunch or break times, however, isn't. It also goes without saying that there are some sites on the net that logging onto could result in administrative action being taken and those sites cannot be accessed at any time on a government computer system."

In the latest issue of the squadron's "Lajes Network Bytes," a newsletter issued monthly and available on the web, only four of the top 20 accessed sites surveyed over a 24-hour period, four day period were military related.

"The number one site, with more than twice as many hits as the number two site, was CNN/SI," Bone said. "The first dot-mil site was the Air Force Personnel Center which had less than one-third the hits of CNN/SI." The other three dot mil sites were the Lajes homepage, www.af.mil and afpubs.hq.af.mil.

According to data in the newsletter more than 60 percent of the bandwidth available to Lajes users is eaten up by people casually surfing the web.

While the statistics used in the newsletter lent more than a little credibility to the administrators' claims of improper usage, there was still room for caution.

Senior Airman Brian Haynie, the base network security administrator, said the numbers may not be totally accurate because of the 24-hour sample.

Haynie compiled another sample from the hours of 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday and again Tuesday of this week. The numbers, while obviously not as large, show essentially the same trends - surfing use far outweighing official use.

"During duty hours Monday CNNSI.com was still the most-hit site on the net and there were only three dot mil sites," he said.

One of the interesting things that's easy to see when looking at web site access is that Mother's Day is just around the corner. On Monday's list www.ftd.com and go.flowerlink.com both made the cut, with FTD slipping into the top five with nearly 100 hits.

Another major disruption in the bandwidth from Lajes are continuous download features such as Pointcast and Real Audio. The Pointcast program keeps a continuous update of news information flowing across a person's computer screen. The program is constantly using bandwidth to transmit the data. Real Audio allows users to listen to radio stations from all over the world live. It too, has a constant drain on bandwidth.

"While both of these programs no doubt provide people with information or entertainment, we don't have the capacity here to run a significant number of those features as well as let people who are trying to conduct official business operate at peak efficiency. Because of that people should not be using either of these programs or any similar programs," Haynie said.

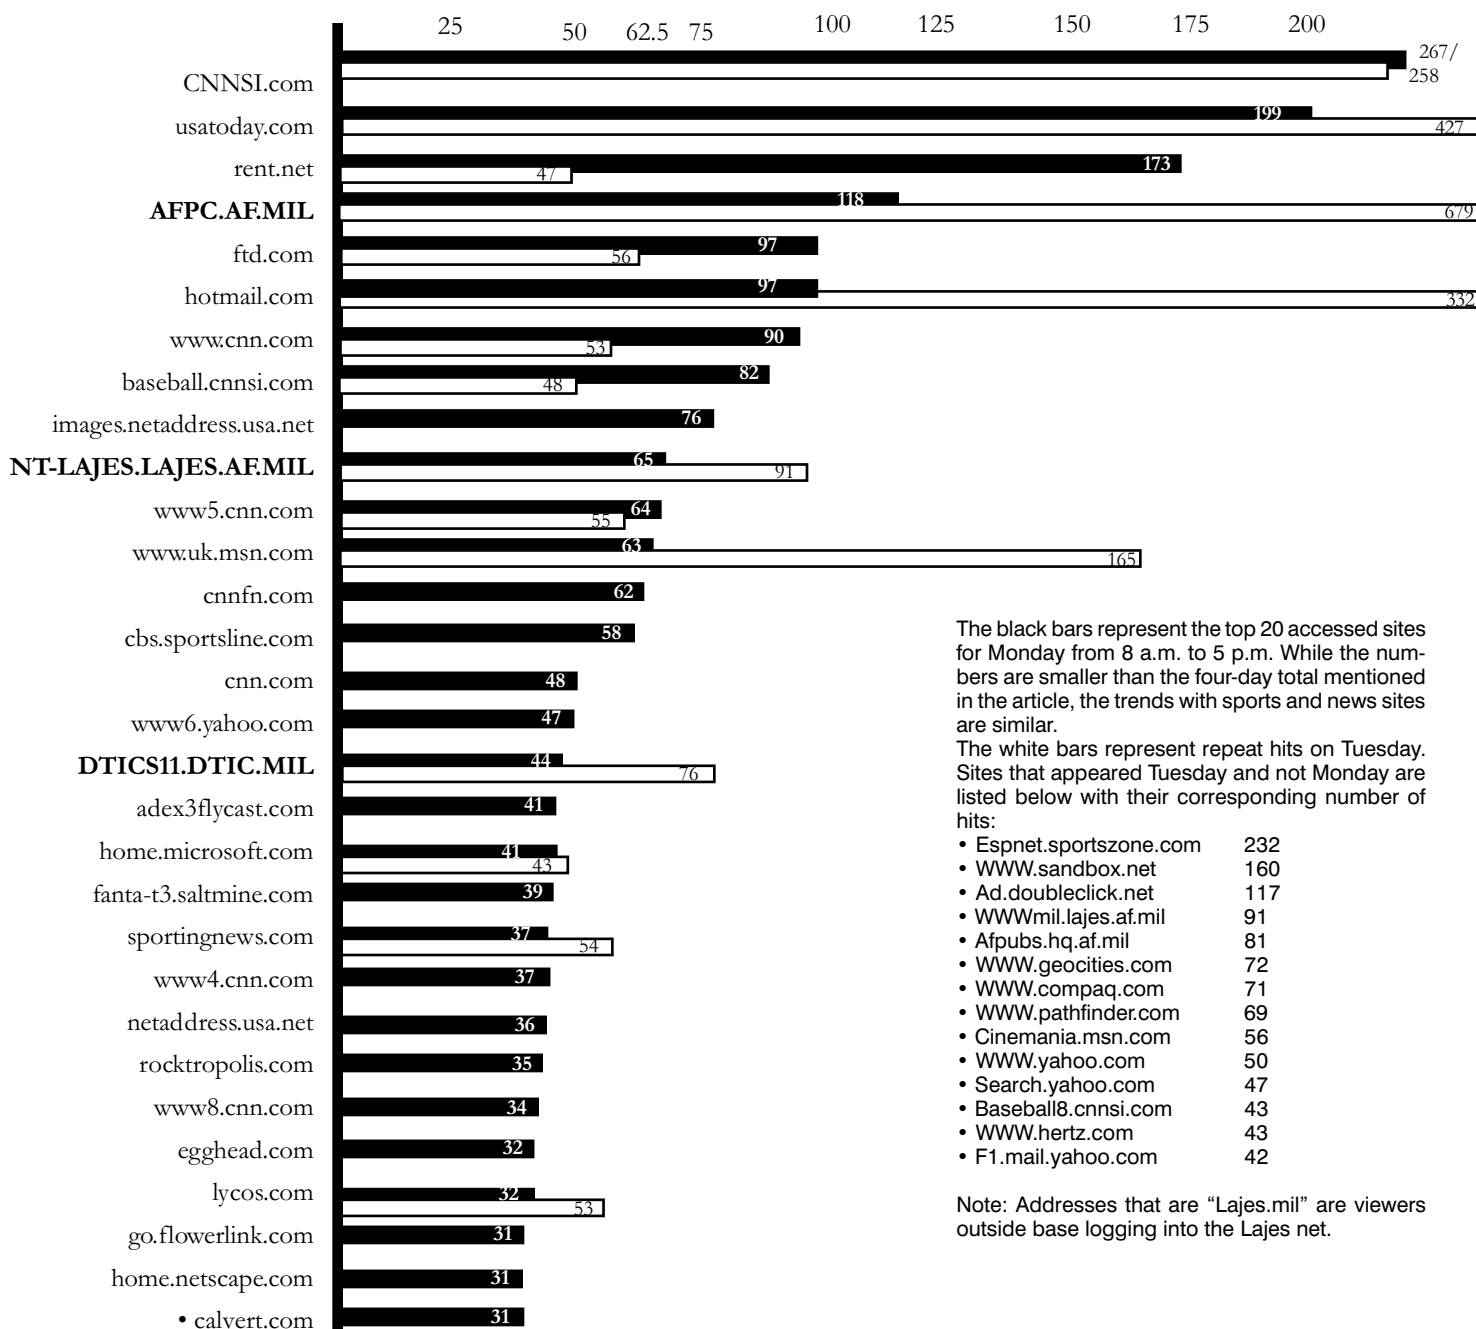

The bottom line for users is that surfing is still an option, but only after duty hours and now, more than ever, rules of the information highway are being strictly enforced.

Personal use of e-mail and the Internet is authorized for Department of Defense employees. Use is authorized Monday through Friday before 8 a.m. and after 5 p.m., during the weekends and all day on U.S. holidays Internet users should keep in mind that some activities are prohibited when using government computer hardware or software. Complete guidance can be found in AFI 33-129 dated Jan. 1, 1997. Squadron commanders will ensure tha e-mail using an "All" address is either time-sensitive or mission critical. If a commander determines an e-mail should be transmitted using "All" addressing, the e-mail will be addressed to the "All Base LAN Administrator" address group found in the global address list."

Signed -- RODNEY E. GIBSON, Col, USAF

The black bars represent the top 20 accessed sites for Monday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. While the numbers are smaller than the four-day total mentioned in the article, the trends with sports and news sites are similar.

American team to recover remains in North Korea

WASHINGTON (AFNS)—Department of Defense officials are in North Korea to begin the first of five scheduled operations for 1998 to recover the remains of servicemen unaccounted for from the Korean War.

The 10-man team is operating in an area about 60 miles north of the capital of Pyongyang in Kujiang County. It is the site of a November 1950 battle between the communist Chinese army and the U.S. 8th Army, 25th Infantry Division. This area was the site of fierce combat where about 50 U.S. soldiers fell. More than 8,100 American servicemen are unaccounted for from the Korean War.

Specialists from the Army's Central Identification Laboratory, Hawaii will spend about 25 days at the excavation site. These teams include experts in forensic anthropology; mortuary affairs; explosive ordnance disposal; logistics; photography; communications and medical support. Two members of the team will remain in Pyongyang to maintain communications linkage between the site and the United States.

This is the third year DOD teams have conducted joint remains recovery operations in North Korea. In 1996 and 1997, the remains of seven servicemen were recovered. One has been identified and returned to his family for burial with full military honors. During 1997, U.S. military people operated for six consecutive months inside North Korea.

These operations are part of agreements negotiated with the North Koreans by the Defense Prisoner of War and Missing Personnel Office. They include archival reviews of North Korean military documents.

One such review was conducted in the Fatherland Liberation Museum in 1997 in Pyongyang, and another is scheduled there next month. Documents obtained in these archival reviews are analyzed for any information relating to American servicemen then provided to their family members.

The last of the five operations this year ends in October. Americans will conduct recovery operations in North Korea almost continuously for the next seven months.

Air Force dedicates latest B-2 bomber to Mississippi

LANGLEY AIR FORCE BASE, Va. (AFNS)—The U.S. Air Force will name the nation's newest B-2 Spirit stealth bomber the "Spirit of Mississippi" in a ceremony at the Air National Guard Base at Thompson Field, Jackson, Miss., May 23 at 11:00 a.m.

The ceremony is open to the public with gates opening at 8:00 a.m.

The Spirit of Mississippi, the 19th B-2 stealth bomber to be named, will be on display immediately following the ceremony. This is an opportunity to see the highly advanced aircraft up close.

Visitors can view the Spirit of Mississippi, talk with crew members, enjoy music performed by the U.S. Air Force Heartland of America Band, and take home autographed posters of the B-2.

Scheduled to preside over the activity are Gen. Richard E. Hawley, commander of Air Combat Command, and Kent Kresa, chairman of the board, president and chief executive officer of Northrop Grumman Corp. Col. Robert A. Barron, commander of the 172nd Airlift Wing at the Air National Guard Base at Thompson Field, Jackson, Mississippi, will host the event.

Also invited to attend the ceremony are all members of Mississippi's congressional delegation and Mississippi's governor. The B-2 stealth bomber, based at Whiteman Air Force Base, Mo., is capable of delivering conventional and nuclear munitions anywhere on the globe. Its combination of low observability, large payload capacity, near-precision munitions and long range give it a unique ability to penetrate sophisticated defenses and threaten an enemy's war-making capability.

U.S. remains from Southeast Asia identified

WASHINGTON (AFNS)—Remains of three airmen previously unaccounted for from Southeast Asia have been identified and are being returned to their families for burial in the United States.

The returning airmen are Col. Richard K. Allee, Port Jervis, N.Y.; Col. Gordon L. Page, Palo Alto, Calif.; and Capt. Armon D. Shingledecker, Lima, Ohio.

On Dec. 21, 1968, Allee was flying a mission over Khammouan Province, Laos. During an attack dive, his F-105D Thunderchief burst into flame.

In 1994, a U.S.-Lao team searched the crash site and found evidence of a crash and wreckage. The site was excavated in 1996 and remains, effects and life-support equipment were recovered. Forensic analysis confirmed the remains were Allee's.

Page was flying one of two RF-101C Voodoo aircraft, on a photo reconnaissance mission over Vinh, Vietnam, on March 7, 1966. Both aircraft were lost, and no contact was established with either pilot.

In 1989, the Vietnamese turned over 28 sets of purported American remains. One set was identified as Page's wingman.

Interviews by joint U.S.-Vietnamese investigative teams supplied information correlating to Page's shootdown but no crash site was located. Re-examination of remains repatriated in 1989, using advanced technology, determined they belonged to Page.

On May 31, 1966, Shingledecker was a passenger in a C-130 Hercules. A flight of American F-4s flying over Thanh Hoa Province reported seeing a large ground flash shortly after the C-130 attempted radio contact. When the C-130 failed to return to base, a search mission was launched but no crash site was found. A report indicated eight crewmen were killed in the crash. Five were repatriated in 1986 and the other three were destroyed in the crash.

Vietnam repatriated 22 boxes of alleged American remains in April 1986. Shingledecker's name was associated with one of the sets. Forensic analysis of the remains identified those of Shingledecker.

With the accounting of these three servicemen, there are 2,090 unaccounted-for Americans from the Vietnam War.

Working with an overweight child

Capt. Debra Maxwell
Registered Dietitian

If your child is overweight, there are some things you should and shouldn't do.

DO

- Work with a health professional who has experience with weight control to develop a medically sound and nutritionally balanced plan for your child. At Lajes, the pediatrician and the registered dietitian are part of your family's wellness team.

- Encourage and support recommendations made by the health professional.

- Make mealtime pleasant. Encourage the child to eat slowly and to enjoy whatever he or she eats.

- Involve the child in shopping and food preparation.

- Ask the advice of a mental health professional on the issue of other siblings or friends teasing the obese child.

- For the entire family, discourage eating food in front of the television.

- Many overweight children are not aerobically active. They may be active in different activities, but these activities usually don't provide a cardio-vascular workout. Encourage biking, skate boarding, trampolining, and other aerobic activities.

- Examine your own dietary intake and attitudes toward food, and taken an active role in establishing a healthy outlook toward exercise, eating, and body image with your child.

DON'T

- Single out the obese child in the family by serving special foods or impose restrictions. Include the whole family in making healthier, low-fat choices.

- Give foods as a reward or withhold them as a punishment.

- Tell a child he or she is "on a diet" and that certain foods are "good" and others are "bad."

- Discuss the child's weight in front of others.

For more information, call the Health Hut at 23889.
